Wheeling, May 28, 1890.

Booms are started and booms collapse in other States but the steady and substantial development in West Virginia continues uninterrupted.

It is stated that Mr. Wm. L. Scott is interested in a syndicate which has been importing miners in violation of the contract labor law. Mr. Scott, it is remembered, was Mr. Cleveland's chief adviser and the special champion of his cause.

MAJOR J. G. DOWNTON, of Putnam county, it is said, is willing to accept the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Fourth district. Major Downton at present holds a Government position in Washington, but is not satisfied to wait enough alone. However, if he is willing to resign, in order that some good Republican may be given the place, we know of no one whom we would prefer to see Representative Smith defeat in a Congressional race.

Our advice comes from newspapers are giving their readers concerning the answering of Census Enumerators is so foolish that it is a wonder intelligent people consider it. Nearly all of the questions which are denounced as impertinent have been propounded in former censuses, while that concerning mortgages, which they consider the most outrageous of all, is perfectly proper. Nobody should be so stupid as to refuse to give a government officer information which is a matter of public record in every county clerk's office.

Meeting with Power.
The plan to organize a Central Republican Club in Wheeling seems to have met with general favor, and no doubt the organization will start off with a large membership, which will be the beginning of what the promoters hope to make it, a club of several hundred members, conducted upon purely Republican principles. It will not be exclusive and the membership will be unlimited. There will be little or no expense in the way of dues, etc., and the benefits will fall upon all alike. Republicans of every class and condition will be welcomed.

The Fifteenth Street Petition.
The petition presented to Council last night from the citizens living along Fifteenth street, praying for the paving of that thoroughfare, is a matter which ought to be favorably considered by the Board of Public Works, to which it was referred. Fifteenth is one of the most compactly built streets in the city, and the interests of the taxpayers and residents who live between End and the head of the street deserve recognition. The central location and the prominence of the thoroughfare would justify any action taken to beautify and improve it. The petition should be granted.

Police Reform.
Our esteemed neighbor, the Register, does this newspaper an injustice in commenting on the needed reforms in the Police Department of the city, when it says: "The Intelligencer will only clog the way to these needed changes by dragging politics into the discussion." This the Intelligencer has not done, and our neighbor has forgotten what we really did say we quote the following paragraph from Monday's INTELLIGENCER:

"The Intelligencer believes that these reforms should be advocated outside of party lines. So long as partisan politics enter into the management of the city departments the institution of reform will be delayed. Is the Register willing to lay aside politics in the next city election and join in a general non-partisan reform movement?"

The Register has not yet answered this question, but it is in earnest about not wanting to "clog the way to these needed changes" it will favorably consider it.

Of course the Intelligencer is for anything that will secure to the city of Wheeling more efficient police service. The evils of which our neighbor complains we have repeatedly pointed out, but have heretofore been coldly supported by our Democratic friends, who have insisted upon making the matter a party question, and nearly every criticism we have offered concerning the conduct of city departments has been met with a defense by the Register. Now we ask our neighbor if it is willing to go about a reform work in a practical manner by laying aside partisan politics and making the issue solely one of reform outside of party lines.

Manual Training in City Schools.
Superintendent Compton, of the Toledo, Ohio, public schools, in a paper read before the National Department of Superintendence, discussed the extent to which manual training may be introduced into the city schools. He gave it as his opinion, based on an experience with manual work with the four highest grades of pupils in a city of 100,000 inhabitants, that the work was not only proved very interesting and attractive, but that it has been most wholesome and helpful in many ways. Speaking from the standpoint of an instructor, he believes that where manual training is to be had in the grammar and high schools, the boys say to complete the course of study instead of seeking the shelter of railroad office, banks and dry goods stores. "The pale faces," says Mr. Compton, "become ruddy and strong, because proper exercise is given."

A very important benefit outside of the practical educational and physical results, is that manual training is good for the morals, as wherever it has been tried it has, to a great extent, done away with idleness, loafing and dissipation, so apt to claim the time of boys who are exposed to the temptations incident to city life. This is the testimony of all who have observed the workings of the system.

Another good result, is to use Mr. Compton's language, "that it develops and fosters new and wholesome views as to the proper relations between the poor, the middle and the opulent classes, and banishes that tendency in certain circles to look down upon the horridly-handled son of toil." It teaches boys the dignity of labor, and develops the mechanical genius, and gives to the boys and girls an education which will enable them to take hold of the practical business of life, trained in the use of tools, processes and principles.

Wheeling has made a small start in this matter, and so far it does demonstrate the practicability of the project. Let our Board of Education take hold of the matter and introduce manual training in the Wheeling schools, and we feel sure that the same degree of success which has been met with in other cities will be experienced here.

American and English Wages.
Even the rank and file of Free Traders is forced to admit that the wages paid to mechanics and laborers in the United States are from one-half to three-fourths higher than wages paid in England, but he accounts for it by saying there is a great difference in the cost of living in the two countries. He is wrong, however, as usual. Recently attention has been called by the American Economist to the market quotations in England and America in support of the claim made by the Protectionists that the Free Trade claim is not true. Very few of the articles required for family use are higher in the United States than in England. If house rent is higher here it is because the men who build houses are better paid than the same class of mechanics across the water. Meat, breadstuffs, butter, cheese, fruit, etc., are cheaper here than in England.

The American workman, it is true, spends more money for his family, but he has the satisfaction of knowing that as a result his table is better supplied than that of the English workman; that he has meat often and more of it; that his wife and children are better dressed; that he spends more because he receives more for his toil.

Free trade has prevailed in England for forty years, says the Economist, and yet the laboring classes are not convinced that it is the best policy for them, as is shown by the fact that more than one-third of all the immigrants that come to protected America are from Great Britain. Weary of efforts along the level of the "markets of the world," more than three thousand British subjects each week find refuge from inevitable poverty under a government committed to the protection of its working classes.

The Manchester, England, Courier is published at the birth place of England's Free Trade doctrine, which was originally known as "the Manchester project." Recently it published an editorial from which we quote the following:

"Free trade does employment and lowers wages, and our working people are finding it out; they do not exactly see that handing over their work to be done by foreign workers will land them in an earthly paradise; the conviction must dawn upon them that if there is no work here for them, they must leave the country or find shelter in the workhouse. The 'Free Trade' doctrine has more confidence for years after its adoption; but such is known after bitter disappointments. (Protection) is certain, directly the people see that they have been deceived."

Let the American workman ponder well the above words before being deluded like the poor English laborers, into accepting false theories.

THE FISH AND GAME LAW.

When You May Hunt and Fish in West Virginia Under What Conditions.

In response to many requests from fishing and hunting clubs the INTELLIGENCER publishes the following abstracts of Sections 1, 2 and 4 of Chapter 41 of the Code of West Virginia, which contains the provisions of the latest enacted fish and game law of this State, passed by the Legislature of 1889:

1. No person shall kill, chase or wound, any deer from the fifteenth day of December to the fifteenth day of September following. No person shall hunt or chase any deer with dogs within this State for the period of five years from the passage of this act.

2. If any person shall shoot, hunt, range, fish or fowl, within the boundaries of another person without permission from the owner, occupier or agent thereof, he shall forfeit three dollars for each offense to the owner, and if he is a person convicted a third time of said offense, the justice rendering judgment therefor shall require him to give a recognizance, with security, in a sum of not less than one hundred dollars, for his good behavior for a year; or, if he fail to give such recognizance, commit him to jail for one month unless he sooner gives.

4. It shall not be lawful for any person to catch or destroy any of the fish in the creeks or rivers of this State by means of any net, trap, snare, fish pot, weir, traps, by skedging, shooting, or other devices (except by hook and line, gig and spear); nor shall it be lawful to fish in the creeks, rivers or streams of this State, at any time, by means of any net, trap, snare, fish pot, weir, traps, or any other device, which forces the poison in the water and eliminates it from the blood.
